Information Security Management

Meeting the standard

For modern businesses, the ability to generate and process information, email, work remotely and operate a website without falling victim to cybercrime and more, is crucial to everyday operations and success.

As a business you also have a duty of care to protect not only your own organisation but also your customers, suppliers, partners and other parties from occurrences such as information being lost, misused or falling into the wrong hands.

IT support vendors are frequently in a situation where they could gain access to confidential information. They could also, in perfectly good faith, perform tasks which could cause your information and the systems it resides on to be compromised.

This is why you need an IT support partner whom you can trust unequivocally to look after the safety and security of your systems and information.

Your assurance is that we are certified to BS ISO/IEC 27001:2013 - the only auditable international standard which defines the requirements for an Information Security Management System (ISMS). An ISMS is a systematic approach to managing and protecting the security of computer systems and the sensitive information stored on them. Our ISMS helps us to manage and protect our valuable information assets and give confidence to you and your customers that the appropriate controls are in place to minimise the range of threats to which you are increasingly subjected and giving you a significant edge over your competitors.

“ To CCE, IT security and safety are second nature. To be seen as a trusted organisation is crucial. ”
